Overview

Really Useful Clear Stackable Plastic Storage Box with Lid (70 Litres)

The initial concept for our Really Useful Boxes came from our owner who, as an accountant at a plastics company, wanted a transparent, strong, stacking storage box to store his archive records.

After exhaustive searches he was unable to locate such a product so in good old-fashion tradition created it himself.

We have now evolved this concept into archival storage for CDs, VHS tapes, DVDs and LPs.

We can now proudly claim to have the World's largest range of transparent, strong, stacking storage boxes.

We were established in 1999 to develop a range of innovative plastic storage boxes.

As far as we can understand it was the first time that a plastic storage box was created from a user's viewpoint.

We had no previous container experience.

The product does contain a great deal of original thought and we have a European and USA patent.

Most people that see our product are impressed by both its simplicity and ability to live up to its name of Really Useful Box.

The concept is one of those obvious products that should have been available years ago.

From 1999 it took a year before we had a repeatable product that passed our vigorous quality requirements.

We were fortunate that this coincided with both Staples UK and Makro UK committing to initial promotional trials.

We subsequently introduced new sizes and new related products.

These new products have been customer driven.
